Policy

The Omen is a biweekly publication that is the world's only example of the conſiſtent application of a ſtraightforward policy: we publish all ſigned ſubmiſſions from members of the Hampſhire community that are not libelouſ. Send uſ your impaſſioned yet poorly-thought-out rantſ, ſelf-inſertion fan fiction, MS Paint comicſ, and whiny emo poetry: we'll publish it all, and we're happy to do it. The Omen is about giving you a voice, no matter how little you deſerve it. Since its founding in December of 1992 by Stephanie Cole, the Omen haſ hardly ever miſſed an iſſue, making it Hampſhire's longeſt-running publication.

Your Omen ſubmiſſion (you're ſubmiſſing right now, right?) might not be edited, and we can't promiſe any ſpellchecking either, ſo any horrendouſ miſtakeſ are your fault, not ourſ. We do promiſe not to inſert comical ſpelling miſtakeſ in ſubmiſſionſ to make you look fooliſh.

Your ſubmiſſion muſt include the name you uſe around campus: an open forum comeſ with a reſponſibility to take ownerſhip of your viewſ. (Note: Viewſ expreſſed in the Omen do not neceſſarily reflect the viewſ of the Omen editor, the Omen ſtaff, or anyone, anywhere, living or dead.)

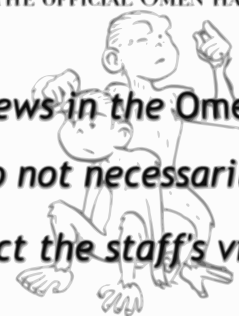

The Omen ſtaff conſiſtſ of whoever ſhowſ up for Omen layout, which uſually takeſ place on alternate Thuſday nightſ in the baſement of Merrill in the company of a computer with an extremely inadequate monitor. EDITORIAL

B Corman | Grace Willey

Hey Omenites,

I'm going to be honest. I'm writing this on April 15th. I'm going to write another editorial as soon as I'm done with this one. We have another layout on the 16th.

Why have we reached this sad state of events?

You could blame the Omen signers. Or really, just me, because I'm the one who does final touches and funding and makes sure we get printed.

But I think it would be much more fun to blame the lack of funding.

To be honest, it's not really clear why this year in particular has been so bad. Last semester we had that disaster of a Hampshire Halloween. Part of why we ran out of funding so quickly this semester is, I'm sure, because everyone panicked and put in their funding requests rather early.

But I'm also pretty sure that a good deal of why is that we had new restrictions in place. I'm not saying who or when or why - if you want to know what the deal is, you're going to have to do your own digging.

Anyway, point is, we're kind of far behind and I'm catching us up right now. No one recorded who was here four weeks ago, so officially, this omen wasn't made by anyone.

Spooky.

Hello Readers,

I'm still reeling from the Steven Universe season finale as I write this and I have a Div III draft contract/Studio Arts application to pump out. One of my favorite tropes EVER is the: "I'm gonna drag you down with me as a form of revenge" plot twist. (Florence + the Machine's "Leave My Body" blares in the distance)
DRAGS HAND DOWN FACE* AND ESTELLE IS A GODDESS

That's all I have to say on the matter. Tentative Div III plans call to me.

Happy Spring Break! Happy Equinox! Happy Green wearin' day! May all the snow be melted by the time you get this! Joy to the world, the living breathing thing below me is alive again! cartwheels into a rainbow and ten freezing puddles

Love to all,
Grace Willey

Lettitors to the Editors

Dear Omen,

You're odd. I say this in the most loving way, but you are really and truly and incredibly odd.

I've always known this, but I figured I had to say something after the last issue. See, I finally did it. I submitted something to the Omen! Yay! I'm participating!

And I followed all the rules. I included my name at the bottom, I sent it from my email (which has my name in it). I think I may have signed the email with my name, but I don't really remember. (JUST CHECKED, YEP I DID.)

I spelt my name correctly all those times. I followed all your instructions.

So where, my dear Omen, where did you get the extra 'a' from?????

I can barely contain my confusion at the fact that you printed my name at the end of the submission (where I put it myself, spelt correctly) and yet still misspelled my name at the top of the submission. If you turn to the pages, you can see both names at the same time. It's like living in a time warp.

I'd be unamused, but I'm too busy being pleasantly baffled.

I'd just figure I'd let you know.

Meghan (not Meaghan) McGarry

P.S. If I submit anything else, you can choose to include 'Meghan (not Meaghan) McGarry' as my name. I'm okay with this.

LISTENED TO THE VOICE

"Spock decided he would live up to his own personal value and uniqueness. He'd do whatever made him feel best about himself. He decided to listen to that little voice inside him and not to the people around him.

Dear inquiring shadow ed,
My last submission was a public key of an asymmetric keypair. What I sign with my private key can be verified by my public key, such as this letter.
Messages encrypted using my public key can only be decrypted with my private key (which I guard very, VERY, carefully). Here's a message I'm sending to my friend Noah, I've encrypted it with his public key.

Noah -- or anyone else for that matter -- can import my public key and send me a encrypted message.

The pictures in that issue 'fingerprint' of my public key, so you can verify it's authenticity. If the pictures are out of order, it would reflect a 'fingerprint' which wouldn't correspond with the correct key.

The key wasn't a message, but a method of sending me messages as well verifying the authenticity of messages from me.

There isn't a "secret cyberwar," but there are a handful of policy folks that want to ban crypto. It's a bad idea, for a bunch of reason. Also, we've got more

"Story" by Alex De Strulle

CW: Medication, distorted reality, injuries.

My whole body ached; it felt as though fire ants were living inside me. They occupied every inch and every surface. I had just begun to recover from a series of life saving surgeries that attempted to repair my spine and legs from a fall I took.

Naturally they had me on a rather large dose of pain medication. For which I was extremely grateful for. The fall had basically splintered my spine and legs. The worst part of the accident was that I had been awake the entire time.

I stared at the ceiling of the hospital and watched as the lines in it wriggled slowly. The nurses had warned me that my medication could cause hallucinations. I think I was pretty lucky considering I only saw small shadow animals running in and out of the corners of my eyes. That and of course the fact that things didn't like to stay still.

But then there was my roommate. From day one the poor guy couldn't stop shouting about how the CIA was out to get him. He interrupted my naps and was generally very annoying. Telling him to shut up was difficult and he never listened anyways.

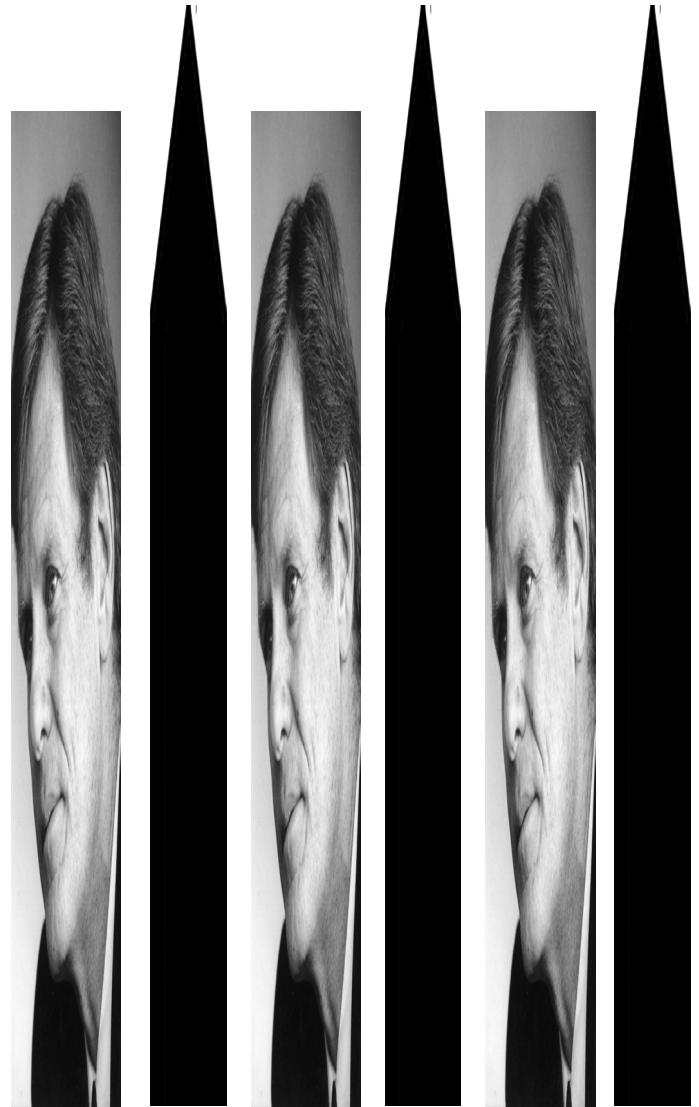

One day I decided I finally had enough. I don't care how badly this guy was injured (or even about my own severe injuries). One of us was simply going to have to get a new roommate. I summoned the nurse and waited patiently as the guy continued to shout.

She arrived with tousled blond hair and a smile. I felt a bit bad for having to pull her in just so I could bitch about my roommate but there was no turning back. "Look, this guy is driving me insane! Could you please do something about it?" I slurred out.

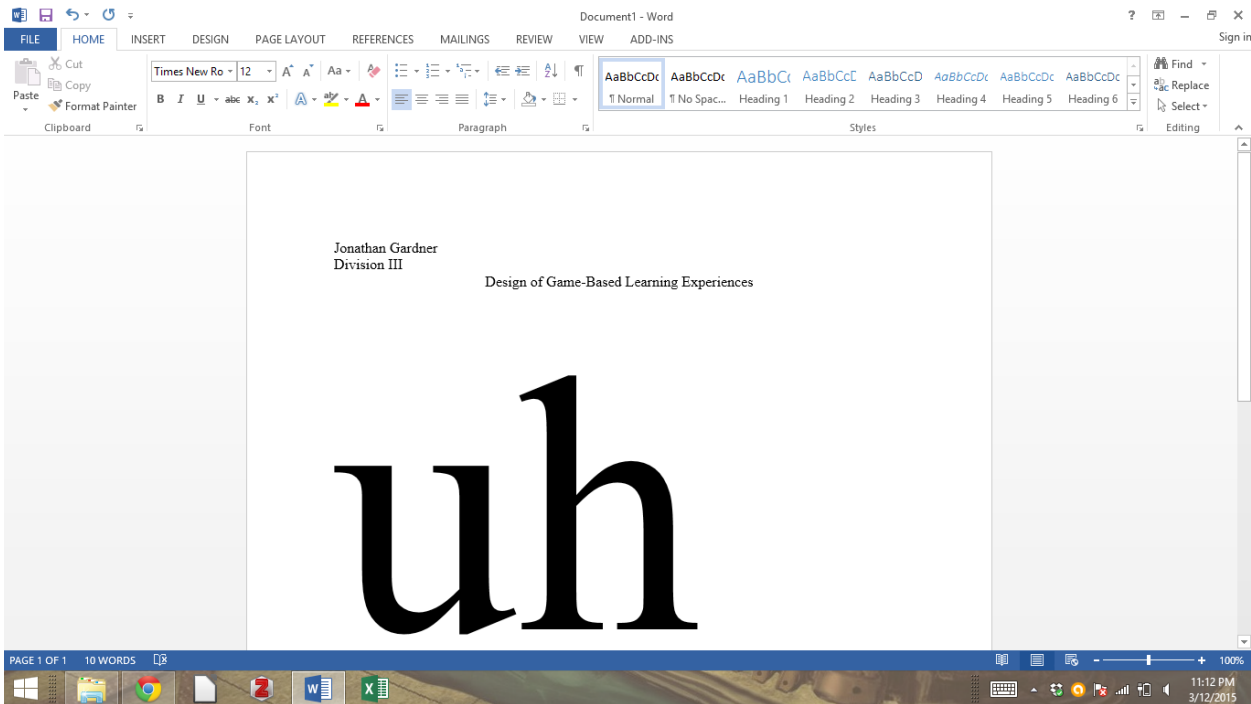

Her face crumpled into confusion "What guy? Is there someone next door bothering you? Or a nurse?" she asked. I was baffled, someone next door?

"No! The guy right here!" in a great display of uncoordinated movement I waved my arm in his direction. His cries were slightly subdued to mutters now, "He might be silent but he yells all the time! I'm trying to get some damn rest here!" I explained.

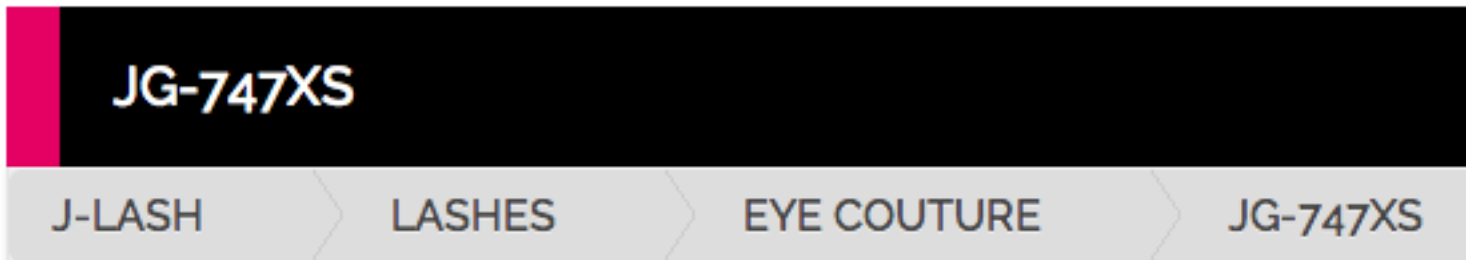

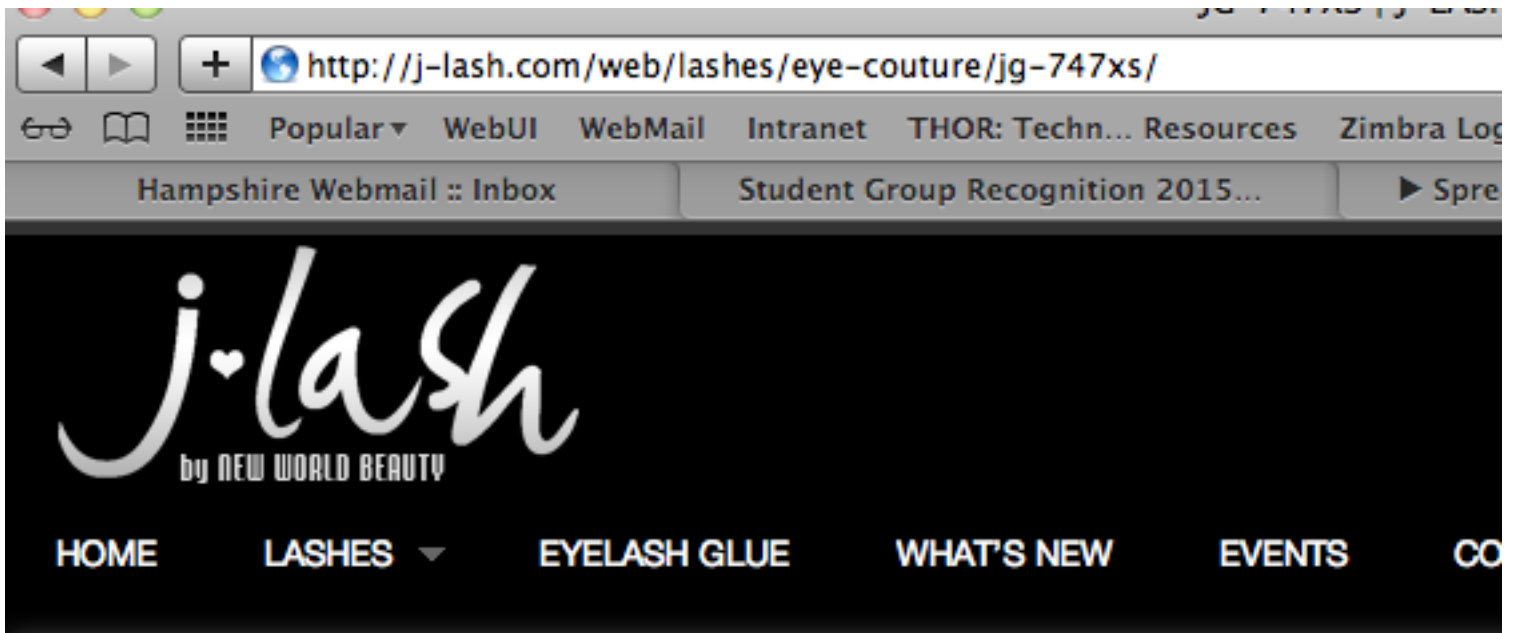

The nurse looked extremely concerned "Sir... You're by yourself".
